Boleo and Corporate Update

Production from the Boleo underground mine and process plant is not currently meeting expectations. Unsatisfactory operating results are being caused by high mine operating costs, low metallurgical recoveries and low copper prices. The operations continue to face significant challenges with lower underground mining rates and grades than originally planned. However, new underground mining equipment has been delivered to try different underground mining methods. Changes are also being made to the process plant to increase metal recoveries. However, improvements in underground mining rates, operating costs and the achievement of targeted recoveries will likely require a lengthy period of time. It is uncertain when operations will become cash flow positive.

The Company continues to pursue other prospective investment opportunities and discussions continue in respect of a possible investment in a small-scale copper processing plant in Chile.

The Company and KORES are still working to finalize documentation related to the revised Minera y Metalurgica del Boleo S.A.P.I. de C.V. (“MMB”) shareholders agreement (the “Shareholders’ Agreement”) and final approvals by KORES and the remaining members of the Korean Consortium are pending. If finally approved, a portion of the management services agreement margin amount owing to Baja by MMB is to be paid to the Company shortly after finalizing the Shareholders’ Agreement.
